Abstract: A catalogue of the specimens of Leguminosae in TAI Herbarium is presented. It is one of the main output formats of the TAIS database system currently operational. The specimens are sorted by species names, major locality, precise locality, and date.

Since its founding in 1928, the Herbarium of the National Taiwan University (TAI) has included over 220,000 specimens of vascular plants. The specimens comprised an extensive representation of Taiwan flora, and have served as an indispensable aid for taxonomic, floristic, ecological, or any other related researches in this region. The Herbarium keeps many specimens from early expeditions of western botanists (e.g., R. Fortune, R. Swinhoe, P.U. Faurie, and A. Henry) to this island. Very large holdings were from Japanese botanists (e.g., Y. Tashiro, T. Kawakami, J. Matsumura, B. Hayata, K. Kanehira, S. Sasaki, S. Suzuki, T. Suzuki, T. Hosokawa, G. Masamune and Y. Yamamoto). They made extensive survey to the whole island during 1895-1935. The Herbarium also includes many specimens from the western Pacific islands.

For a maximum utilization of the information, and to prevent the herbarium from becoming a "data crypt" (Hall 1974), the TAI decided to computerize. Consequently, a database system has been developed (Hsieh et al. 1991), and now is operational and functioning. All collections in the TAI will be completely integrated into the database by late 1994.

Output from the database system is available in a variety of forms. Among them lists of specimens is particularly important. They form essential parts of monographs and floras. Besides, they provide an additional incentive to further field works. The catalogues will be published separately with the family Leguminosae as a start. Within each family, specimens are sorted by specimens names, country, major locality, precise locality, and collection date.

During the preparation of the calalogues, there were some problems concerning the district-names of Taiwan. Since Taiwan has, in the past hundred years, been ruled under several different governments using different languages and adopting different administrative units. Attemp was made to cite most of the collections according to current district names (major localities, as shown in uppercase), while retaining the original precise localities. Scientific names mainly came from Taiwan Flora (Li et al. 1976-1979) with some updates.
